

CrashGuard⁺ CG421

mic isolator for Sennheiser[®] MD 421

USER GUIDE

Thank you and congratulations on purchasing the Primacoustic CrashGuard™ CG421! Please take a few minutes to read through this manual. The CG421 is designed to surround a Sennheiser[®] MD421 microphone on three sides to attenuate the sound of nearby cymbals or hi-hat during the recording process. This attenuation allows the engineer to capture the drum sound without having too much extra sound bleeding into the recording. Please refer to www.primacoustic.com for various placement options, benefits, and general information. Should you have any questions or comments, we invite you to send us an email at info@primacoustic.com.

Mounting Position A:

The CG421 is designed to fit any standard boom arm. Begin by taking the mic clip off your mic stand boom arm. Make sure you leave the knurled ring on that usually comes with most booms. The CG421 comes equipped with a spare ring in case you do not have one. Push the CG421 onto the boom arm then screw the mic clip onto the boom. Do not over tighten. Connect the mic by passing the cable through the rear access port. The mic may be articulated up and down. Leave some space between the mic head (capsule) and the inside of the CG421. This will reduce any effect the shell may have on the mic's polar pattern.
